

Abstract of the Disclosure

A cellular communication system that enables an improved monitoring of interference is provided. The cellular communication system includes a cell station and a maintenance terminal. The cell 5 station provides a communication service for a personal station, and also executes continuous monitoring of an interfering wave during a period to produce an interference monitor data representative of a property of the interfering 10 wave. The maintenance terminal produces an interference profile based on the property.